Subject: In re: BCRA

In reference to the BCRA:

I don't pretend to know a lot about this signing of this "bill" (if that's what it is) but I do know that when I belong to an organization that I believe in I wholeheartedly believe that they should be able to contact me by any means that I have made available to them prior to any election. As Americans, we all don't have the opportunity to study the issues on which we vote on at length as many people, like myself, have to work 50-60 hours a week and have additional commitments once work is done for the day. I join certain organizations so that they can keep me abreast of information which I most assuredly would not know if they did not contact me. Any good corporation has a chain of communication to keep the CEO informed. He or she is not expected to glean all the information necessary to run a business as an individual. Likewise, I glean my information from organizations I know, trust and support. These may not be the same organizations someone else supports but that's what individuality is about. I am not a mindless robot that will vote on an issue just because a certain organization says I should but I do deserve the right to information and it seems to me that "BCRA" is taking drastic steps to revoke my personal right to get information from whom I choose and vote with that information in hand.

Thank you for allowing my input.

Sincerely,

Amy Whitten
